A brief report:

'Success is not final and failure is not fatal', is an oft quoted statement. However, if there was one moral the students drew at the end of the morning's Middle School Elocution Competition, it was just that.

The speakers delivered their poems and extracts with panache. The pieces varied from humorous poems to mystical extracts and even classical poetry. The students were judged on selection of poems, their overall delivery and their expressions. A great deal of hard work had been put in by both teachers and students. The competition went off without a glitch and was truly perfect in every way.
